Hoisted By My Own Petard

Letters from Berea

Beth Myers
Editor

I had a complaint last week, regarding my article on the redesign of a three-lane for Highway 25N. In that article, I had referred to property owners building parking lots and “other structures” on the state owned right-of-way. The complainant felt that “other structures” was not accurate, and gave the perception that business owners adjacent to the highway had put buildings on state owned land.

I found myself bristling just a little bit when I heard of this, and I immediately looked up the definition of structure, to defend my word usage. “Something built or constructed” was one definition I was pleased by, since I felt it could refer to many things seen by the highway, such as signs, and was that a retaining wall I may have seen at one point? To rest my case, counselor, there is evidence of “structures” on the state owned right-of-way in addition to parking lots.

Of course, at some point it struck me that I had, ironically, written a column last week about truth vs. accuracy in journalism.

That, my friends, is being hoisted by one’s own petard.

The point, after all, wasn’t whether the definition of structure would pass in a court of law, but if it told a true picture of the situation. Almost exclusively, parking lots are the structures on the state owned right-of-way.

But there were two other definitions of structure I found interesting – 1) a complex system considered from the point of view of the whole rather than of any single part; and 2) anything composed of parts arranged together in some way. Currently, I would say our structure of Highway 25N is parts arranged together in some way, a rather haphazard way in my opinion. But I liked thinking of Highway 25N as a system – composed of traffic going in and out of Berea, businesses and residential owners lined up on the side, bikers interested in safely commuting to this end of town, pedestrians from the schools and homes wanting to cross roads safely and finally, parking. All of these individual parts in the same place, working together as a whole system.

Individual parts working together in a community

As I look at this highway corridor into town, however, it’s obvious that there’s some work to do to get from a haphazard arrangement of buildings and offices and homes, and a whole lot of pavement; to a complex system that flows smoothly. I use more businesses down there than anywhere else in town, but it’s certainly not going to win any beautification awards.

I wonder if all of us could lay down our singular interests, and start to see this as an opportunity to build a quality system on Highway 25 N. Could we be creative about possibilities, such as shared city parking lots, or biking/walking connections from business to business? Are there other ways to compensate for what businesses may lose in space and/or resources?

Amazingly enough, District 7 has actually put forth a redesign, and even incorporated almost all of the requests of the citizens. Are we looking at an opportunity to build something more attractive, more safe, on a highway where people are constantly coming and going in Berea? And could we be in danger of throwing that opportunity away?

We have the opportunity to move from a structure “composed of parts arranged together in some way”, to a complex system considered from the point of view of the whole rather than of any single part.

We have the opportunity. Now we have to move.

the REAL March madness

From our readers

On Second Thought

To the Citizen,

On March 1, 2012 I wrote a letter to the editor titled “Leading in the Right Direction?” I try to, with the best of my ability, live a Christian life. I have stated in the past my strong feelings about the Human Rights Commission and The Favoritism Ordinance being pushed by some from Berea College and some of our city leaders.

I sometimes forget how to put my thoughts into words. I know many fine and faithful Christians at Berea College, students and staff and to imply that all were pushing this agenda was wrong and I am very sorry if I offended or hurt anyone. Once you say something wrong, it’s impossible to go back and do it over. I hope those that know me can forgive me.

The Bible says, “Either how canst thou say to thy brother, Brother, let me pull out the mote that is in thine eye, when thou thyself beholdest not the beam that is in thine own eye? Thou hypocrite, cast out first the beam out of thine own eye, and then shalt thou see clearly to pull out the mote that is in thy brother’s eye.” Luke 6:41-43.

I did not mean to indicate all of Berea College was pushing this agenda.

Demanding Accountability

Dear Editor

Recently the school board voted to proceed with a $4.5 million athletic complex at Madison Central. This is 300% expenditure over what they spent to upgrade the athletic complex of Madison Southern. The lone voice of reasoning was John Lackey who acknowledged the need for upgrade and repair but called for a more common sense approach.

The board of education is facing a shortfall this year of $600,000. Next year’s proposed budget is planning on approximately a $3 Million shortfall. The board is basically ignoring the 800 pound gorilla in the room, the looming pension crisis that will hit them and the state in the next two years.

Every year they raise our property taxes the maximum 4% they are allowed without the voters voting on it. Last year they gave superintendent Tommy Floyd a nearly 12% pay raise on top of the many perks he already receives such as we the tax payers paying for his doctorate degree. Who do you think will benefit from that? He will when he wants to apply for a new job.

The board of education is currently looking at plans for a new elementary school in the northern part of the county at a cost of more than $20 million. They could have been more frugal upgrading Central’s existing complex and saved the rest for the new construction. But when the time comes they will issue new bonds, go further in debt, and have to appeal for a significant tax increase to pay for it. So while our county ranks 206 out of 230 school districts the emphasis is placed on an unneeded sports complex. It is time we demand accountability and fiscal responsibility from our school board members. This November, vote for change for our children’s sake.

Lisa Davis

Demanding Accountability Too

Dear Editor,

On behalf of the citizens of Madison County, members of the local Tax Watch group, I’d pose a serious question. After reviewing the actual evaluation document used by our BOE, we have found no line item calling to account the Superintendent’s responsibility for our children’s academic performance. Why would this be?

Mr. Floyd has stated that the performance and academic well being of the students is his primary goal. In the last four years of Mr. Floyd’s oversight, our academic rating has consistently gone downhill.

Can you please help us to remedy this and to have this criteria included immediately into the evaluation document to be included for this current evaluation as presented at the March 8th public meeting.

After Mr. Floyd’s generous 12% raise last year, this cannot continue. Raises must be based on whether this district succeeds or fails, not on image, PR, or promoting relationships that cannot get our children’s grades up to a higher standard. The fact that a majority of the BOE ‘like’ the Superintendent is not legitimate grounds for a pay hike.

Yours truly,
Debora Secchione
Madison County TaxWatch

Editor’s note, this letter was initially written to the Kentucky Department of Education and reprinted here at the request of the writer.

March Out and Plant a Tree

outdoors

Clint Patterson,
College Forester

The month of March is often cold, damp and gloomy. Winter is behind us, but spring doesn’t quite seem here either. Often a month of “blah”, I doubt if March is at the top of anyone’s list of favorite months.

Nevertheless, March is a great time to plant trees. Tennessee, where I used to work, celebrates Arbor Day on the first Friday of March each year. Kentucky, on the other hand, celebrates Arbor Day on the first Friday in April. Either way, the point is, it’s time to plant trees!

Arbor Day was founded by J. Sterling Marlin in Nebraska in 1872, with over a million trees planted in one day. Originally celebrated on his birthday, April 22, other states rapidly began to adopt their own Arbor Day events; some on different dates to optimize the best time for tree planting.

States recognize the day as a time for educators, civic societies and government officials to create “a better understanding of nature and the importance of protecting wildlife, planting and cultivating flowers, and setting and protecting trees.”

Many towns across Kentucky hold special tree-planting ceremonies on or around Arbor Day. This is a great time to plant trees. But, you don’t have to plant them on a particular day. Don’t wait until the weather is too warm and sunny, and the trees are already fully leafed-out to plant them. They need to get settled in with wet, cool weather, before the dry, hot summer is upon them.

Planting a tree can be a fun family activity. Children will have a special affinity for a tree that they helped to plant. They will enjoy being able to watch it grow and compare its height to their own as they are growing up. Be sure to take a picture of the child with the tree after it is planted, for future reference. Planting a tree is also a good way to commemorate an event such as the birth of a new family member.

Trees can be purchased from local nurseries and local retailers in a variety of sizes and price ranges. Small seedlings can even be ordered online. Another option is to dig one up from your property or find someone who will let you dig some of their trees. It is surprising how many “volunteer” trees come up in flower beds and other places where mowing does not occur. Often, these sprouts can simply be moved when they are small and will make a good tree if they are of a desirable species.

Yes, it may be a gloomy time now, but don’t let that keep you indoors. March out there and plant some trees!

“Let us not be weary in well doing, for in due season we shall reap if we faint not.” - Galatians 6:9

Crossing the Finish Line

Jonathan Schinhofen

I finished the Home Run last Saturday in just under 30 minutes. Not especially impressive. But I had beaten the competition. More on that later. Last fall, at the Spoonbread 5K, I was not even sure I could finish. It shows how far I have come in a short time.

A couple of years ago, a back injury I had suffered when I was 18 years old and invincible had come home to roost. I thought that, at 42 years old, my days of being active were behind me. Then I discovered a device called an inversion table that had me pain-free for the first time in over a year. The table simply hangs you upside down from your ankles. It worked wonders, and I was thrilled just to be able to walk easily.

Damon Rosenbarker, coach of the Berea Community School Cross Country team, inspired me to try the 5K at the Spoonbread Festival. My preparation can hardly be called training. On race day, I needed something to inspire me.

I saw a former employer at the starting line and thought that beating her would be sufficient motivation. Motivation lasted for about a mile. I watched her disappear around the bend on Ellipse Street between mile markers 1 and 2 as I gave up and started walking.

Last Saturday I got a rematch. No matter that my "competition" did not know she was competing. I hovered behind her at the starting line, shot past her at the start of the race and never looked back. I ended up getting much greater satisfaction, however, by beating my Spoonbread time by 9 minutes.

The festivities after the race were characteristic of everything good about Berea. There was coffee from Berea Coffee and Tea (a noble public service to thirsty and caffeine-starved athletes), the trophies were mugs made by Powdermill Pottery, and we were gathered around good causes in the Matt Ross Fund and organ donation awareness.

The gathering was a sort of Berea retrospective for me, as it included people who greeted me when I first arrived in 1995, and people whom I have had the pleasure to welcome.

Award time was a family affair as a number of families went home with two trophies. Lincoln Satterthwaite and his mother Wendy won trophies, as did Jason Meeks and his father Ray, Russ Fields and his wife Marteena, and Susan Stone and her granddaughter Jessica. There may have been more because this list includes only people I know personally.

I did not get a trophy, so my "victory" against my "competitor" will have to suffice. Based on the success of the Home Run this year and the fact that the 5K is becoming such a fixture in Berea, the field of runners will no doubt be stronger in 2013. Unless I get Yoda to teach me how to run, it doesn't look like there are any pottery trophies in my future.

The real prizes will be the friends, good times, and coffee waiting for me at the finish line.

Lots of Options at Crooked Creek Golf Course in London

Crooked Creek Golf Community

781 Crooked Creek Drive London, KY 40744
(606) 877-1993

There's nothing but good news coming out of Crooked Creek Golf Course these days and for golfers it gets even better. The beautiful 18-hole golf course in London, Ky. is now open to the public. That's right. The once private 7000-yard paradise is now open to all.

General Manager Ron Roberts, formerly with Burnside Side Golf Course in Somerset, has not only opened the doors to the public but has brought a new attitude and philosophy to the London course. "We're here to make your visit fun," says the PGA Golf Professional who also worked 11 years in Naples, Florida prior to landing at the General Burnside course. "We want your experience to be fun, enjoyable and positive as you visit our community."

The luxurious banquet rooms in the clubhouse are also now available for private parties and meetings. Crooked Creek offers packages that fit almost any type of event.

Roberts, who is the author of a golf instruction book titled "Golf Stupid Simple" is an avid teacher of the game and wants to introduce golf to all ages especially younger players. It's easy to see why he was recently awarded the 2011 Junior Golf Leader for Kentucky. For the past couple years he has been working on a Golfer Development Program in an attempt to introduce golf into physical education curriculum for area schools grades K-12. Basically, the new man at Crooked Creek wants folks of all ages to play golf and in order to make that possible he and his staff have designed packages to accommodate different income levels and professions.

Roberts has developed more than eight membership packages to make sure no one gets left out. There are single, family and corporate membership packages. There's even a summer only plan for teachers and others who only get a chance for seasonal play.

Crooked Creek has stocked up with new golf carts. Gone are those that gave golfers nightmares in the past. "We want to combine the quality, design and beauty of our course with unparalleled service and our promise is no more golf cart issues," says Roberts.

Ron also doesn't want anyone to forget about the Creeks' driving range. He and the staff would like for you to stop by 781 Crooked Creek Drive in London or call 606.877.1993 and check out their new attitude and spend a day at the Creek. For your convenience the pro shop is open seven days a week from 8am till 9pm.

presented the EXPLORE and PLAN scores. In order to compare “apples to apples”, the two of them showed the scores for the 2011 tenth grade on PLAN and compared that to the EXPLORE scores the same class had in eighth grade two years prior.

Fontanez stated that they were pleased to show that in English, reading and science, the percentage of students reaching the benchmark scores all increased from eighth grade to tenth grade. In English, the students increased from 42.3 percent reaching the benchmark scores in eighth grade to 56.8 percent reaching the benchmark scores in tenth grade, a 14.5 percent increase. In reading, the students increased from 37.2 percent reaching the benchmarks in eighth grade to 49.4 percent meeting the benchmark scores in tenth grade, a 12.2 percent increase. They had the biggest jump in science, with only 10.3 percent meeting benchmark scores in eighth grade, compared to 27.2 percent reaching benchmark scores in tenth grade, a 16 percent increase.

Board members expressed approval of the increases in the three subjects, but were concerned about the math scores. The Berea tenth graders in 2011 actually had a decrease in their scores from their eighth grade year, with 28.2 percent meeting benchmark scores, which then decreased to 23.5 percent.

“Historically, Berea students have done very well in reading,” Fontanez said, “but have struggled with math. It’s the same around the country. We’ve talked about the issue and how to transfer the success from reading to success in math.”

Hogg suggested that part of the problem may be that many Berea teachers have expertise in reading development, but fewer do in math.

Fontanez stated that they would have even more data when this same group, now juniors at Berea, took their ACT at the end of the year.

Both Elementary School Principal Debbie Coleman and Middle/High School Principal Donna Lovell presented their results from the MAP assessment, an on-line test that assesses students on their progress towards proficiency in reading and math. Students at Berea Community will be taking this assessment three times during the school year.

Both reported that there was still a learning curve with the assessment, as students, teachers and administrators adapted to the technology and test strategies. They stated that their spring testing should provide better data.

A representative from the architect firm Tate, Hill and Jacobs reported to the board. They have been working with the energy committee at the school, to review what changes could be made to increase energy efficiency. These systems include the roof, mechanical systems and electrical systems. Tate stated that the next step for the group was to set priorities for the building, see what the budget had available and then get approval from the Kentucky Department of Education.

Gammon Fain was also a candidate for Regional President, though he did not succeed in being elected, and Emma Crump was also a participant in the Talent Show.

“As being an eighth grader competing against high schoolers, placing first was exciting for me,” said Greg Schloemer.

The FBLA state convention will be April 23-25 at the Galt House in Louisville.

Berea Community Elementary School students enjoy a literature-themed game during the third annual Literacy Night held on March 8. This event was one of several in which the students participated.

Elementary students launch into literacy March 5-9

by Megan Phillips

During the week of March 5-9 elementary students participated in several literacy events.

After several fifth graders had designed and presented campaigns for their favorite picture book, students voted for one of these five: Biscuit, The Cat in the Hat, A Bad Case of Stripes, If You Give a Mouse a Cookie, and The Very Hungry Caterpillar. David Shannon’s A Bad Case of Stripes was the winner.

The students also chose their favorite piece of playground equipment, with swings receiving the most votes.

To simulate actual voting Kenny Barger, the Madison County Clerk, and Larry Combs, magistrate of the First District, provided voting booths for the students.

Another major event for the elementary school was on March 8 at their third annual Literacy Night. In an event that was all about reading, students and families could participate in literature-themed games, activities, and events.

There was a book swap, various raffles, games created by different grades, a community fair sponsored by Gear Up, a book fair, a reading drive, guest readers, activities with the Madison County Public Library, and information sessions for parents.

The purpose of Literacy Night was to wrap up Read across America Week, a national reading week promotion. Berea Elementary School’s Literacy Council organized the event, with help from the Middle School student council and the “Pirate Pals.”

The “Pirate Pals” are a group of Advanced Child Development students in the high school.

“They were a big help,” said event coordinator Katie Shafer of the volunteers. “[Literacy Night] is something enjoyable that we try to improve on every year. It’s fun for the kids, and families can walk away with lots of free stuff.”

In addition to the first two events, many students and teachers dressed as their favorite character for Character Day on Friday, March 9.

Destination ImagiNation is a program in which groups of students solve open-ended questions and present their solutions to be scored at tournaments.

BCES Academic Team

The BCES Academic Team competed in the Regional Competition on Saturday, March 17. The team finished third overall, and the Future Problem Solving team won first overall. The Future Problem Solving team consists of Emily Nigro, Cora Livingston, Tori Williams, Ally Stargle, and Blake Maupin. Placing in written assessment were Emily Nigro, who took second in mathematics; Cora Livingston, who placed second in social studies; and Taylor Ramsey who placed fourth in Language Arts.

2 Berea students reach state level competition but fall short of top 10

by Sebastian Brown

The 2011-2012 academic team season came to a close on March 12 last week, with two students, one in middle school the other in high school, making it to the state competition in their respective tests.

Even though both senior Taylor Satterthwaite and Ethan Wilton had respectable scores in their separate categories, they did not garner enough points to receive one of the top ten places.

Seventh grader Ethan Wilton competed in middle school science written test category at state. “I think as a team that we didn’t do well because we aren’t in a league, but as an individual I think I did well.”

The middle school coach, Mrs. Angie West, also believed a league would help expose students to the rigors of a highly competitive situation. She said, “Our middle school was not in a league . . . I’m going through all the ropes to get us in one next year.”

Taylor took the Arts and Humanities test. Having been to state twice before, she knew the differences between it and the lower level competitions. “This time they said, ‘Seniors, this is your Senior Night,’ so they acknowledged us.”

As a veteran member of the team, she said that young members should “Read and absorb as much information as you can about your subject,” and “Don’t do one [subject] you’re not interested in.”

Coach Linda Williams was pleased that Taylor made it to state, but expected more of the team to go with her. “We are a very busy team. They have to divide their time between track, cross country, soccer, and drama, yet people were still very committed, so I felt good. We were number one in the league against 17 other schools [more than regionals] and we were close to number two in our region. It was just that match versus South Laurel,” she said in regards to how she felt about the team as a whole.

She referenced Berea’s third round quick recall match against league rival South Laurel in which Berea was beaten by South Laurel in tie breakers, despite holding a three question lead until the very end of the match.

The loss of five seniors—Jonathan Atkins, Sebastian Brown, Noah Fouch, Braden Mills, Taylor Satterthwaite— troubles Mrs. Williams. “We wish them well, but it’s bittersweet, because they’ll leave some holes in our team.”

She feels that the juniors, though strong, will have to “step up to the plate” especially in Math and Arts and Humanities. After five years of experience coaching, she thinks that she will look for the cycles found in the questions more in future seasons, in an effort to focus their preparation for competition.

BCHS Key Club attends Kentucky-Tennessee District Convention in Chattanooga, TN

by Sebastian Brown

This past weekend, March 16– 18, four Berea Community High School students attended the Kentucky-Tennessee District Key Club convention in Chattanooga, TN.

The purpose of the District Convention is to elect the executive district board for the coming year. The executive board consists of a governor, a secretary, and a treasurer who work closely with a set of ten district adults to oversee the actions of fifteen Lieutenant Governors, who manage the actions of nearly 150 individual clubs.

Sophomore Justin Calhoun and junior Chloe Atwater were selected as delegates for the Berea Community High School Key club. They had to attend caucuses on Friday and Saturday in order to be informed of the candidates’ platforms and experiences in order to make the best selections for the executive board.

“I spent much of the weekend campaigning for Katie Stuart, a candidate for Governor, and a girl I served on board with during the 2010-2011 year. I very much enjoyed watching her win the election, because I know her personally,” said

Chloe. Chloe had the honor of serving on the District Board her sophomore year as the Lieutenant Governor of Division 9.

There are more than 5,000 Key Club members in the Kentucky-Tennessee District, and roughly 500 attended the event. Dylan Gatete of Madisonville, KY won the election for District Treasurer; Emily Meffert of Louisville, KY won the election for District Secretary; and Katie Stuart of Cosby, TN won the election for District Governor for the upcoming year.

Track prepares for outdoors, has high expectations

by Ben Lark

Berea Community High School and Middle School track teams look to kick off the season on a high note. They are some of the largest teams Berea has had, boasting 40 middle school athletes and 21 high school athletes.

Coach Mikki Moren has definite expectations for the season. She said, “This season I would like for every kid to improve each meet and set personal records. We also have a good chance to be one of the top three teams in our Region. Our strongest events will be the men’s 4x4 relay and the girls’ 800 meter race.”

Senior track member Nick Reed stated, “I have high hopes for this season. We have been working hard and we have great leadership this year since we have seven seniors.”

Sebastian Brown, senior, said, “I think this season will be better than last season because we have a lot of new equipment and a new assistant coach, Tia Davis.”

The Middle School’s first outdoor track meet is this Friday at ECU; the high school’s first outdoor track meet will be Tuesday, April 10, at Madison Southern. Both meets will begin at 5:30 p.m.

Three former Lady Mountaineers coach in girls’ Sweet Sixteen, including state champions Dupont-Manual

by Paige Edwards

March Madness being the month for basketball, it was especially significant for three former Lady Mountaineers from Berea College. Kim Owens, Morissa Benberry and Rebecca May Garcia all achieved the accomplishment of coaching teams that made it to this year’s Sweet 16 and one of their teams won the state tournament.

When Owens, Benberry and Garcia all played at Berea College, they set 10 NCAA records and numerous individual records. “All three ladies were a pleasure to coach at the collegiate level. Each (in their

by Connor Cartmill

The Berea Community Varsity Baseball Team started its season with three games this past week.

Despite losing some valuable seniors last year, Coach Bill Smallwood still has high expectations of his squad going into this year. “I think anytime you lose quality seniors it makes an impact. We lost three nice baseball players but have certainly picked up quality young men from our middle school team last year. With the added maturity of our veterans, I think we will be a stronger team when all is said and done,” said Smallwood of his team.

On Tuesday, March 13, despite Berea pitcher Gabe Long’s eight strikeouts, the Pirates dropped a 10-16 home decision to Whitley County for the season opener. Chris Kidd led the way for the Pirates with three hits.

Their next game came the following day at home against Garrard County which Berea lost 6-13. Senior Chris Kidd had six strikeouts in four innings on the mound while fellow senior Ben Miller recorded a two- run home run.

Late in the game against Garrard County Berea coach Bill Smallwood was ejected after an argument with the ump over a questionable call. A three game suspension was to follow the ejection; however it should be decided later whether or not that suspension will be downgraded to one game.

Berea’s last game of the week was at home against Marion County which the Pirates lost 2-7. Senior Ben Miller did most of the mound work for the Pirates as he pitched through six innings.

Despite the slow 0-3 start to the season, the Pirates plan to bounce back this week. Senior Chris Kidd said, “We played some big schools and that tough competition to start the season will definitely help us in the long run.”

The iPhone 4S versus the Samsung Galaxy series: Personal preference becomes deciding factor

by Ben Miller and Stephen Compton

Technology is constantly evolving. In the past 10 years we have moved from analog phones, to phones with QWERTY keyboards, and now smartphones. The smartphone market is basically split between phones that run android operating systems made by Google, and iOS operating systems made by Apple. The iPhone 4s is the top iOS phone, and the Samsung Galaxy series is the top Android series.

The iPhone 4s is the newest in Apple’s line of phones. It runs on the new operating system iOS 5. Only two other phones run iOS 5 right now. They are the iPhone 4 and the iPhone 3Gs. The iOS 5 is amazing to look at, but very closed in customization possibilities, as is true with all Apple operating systems. The 4s runs iOS 5 with perfection. There is hardly any hesitation when switching between apps, switching between pages, or changing menus. Both the iPhone 4s and 4 are equipped with 3.5 inch screens with stunning retina displays. These displays have a 960-by-640-pixel resolution. It has dimensions of 115.2 x 58.6 x 9.3 mm, and weighs 140 grams. The iPhone 4s has a 1GHZ dual-core processor. It also has 512mb of RAM. The graphics on the iPhone are possibly second to none.

The iPhone 4s features a new technology that is not available on any other phone. It is called Siri. It is an interactive voice-control system. It is a very neat technology that can help you make calls, send and read text messages, send emails, find locations and businesses, make appointments, and even set alarms and reminders. It is scratching the surface or future voice control, and it will be very exciting to see what Apple does to improve on this technology. In my experience Siri has worked very smoothly. It does need a data or Wi-Fi connection to work, but it does a great job.

The Samsung Galaxy series is the Apple iPhone’s leading competitor. The new line of Samsung Galaxy smartphones are an Android powerhouse. The newest Galaxy Note runs a 1.4 GHZ dual-core processor and has a very large screen at 5.3 inches. It is not only promoted as a phone, but as a tablet as well. If you prefer something a little less compact, the Samsung Galaxy Skyrocket displays a 4.5 inch screen and a 1.5 GHZ dual-core processor, and the Samsung galaxy SII has a 4.3 inch screen with a 1.2 GHZ dual-core processor.

All the new Galaxy series phones have 1 GB of RAM. The displays on all the Galaxy series phones are incredible. They use Super AMOLED technology, and have resolutions of 800-by-480-pixels. The colors are very bright and saturated. The galaxy series phones run the operating system Android 2.3, nicknamed Gingerbread. This operating system is very open-source, meaning it has many customizable options. Most android phones run very smoothly and run very quickly since the newest android phones use 4G LTE or the 4G HSPA+. Battery life on the Samsung Galaxy phones is not as impressive as the iPhone 4S, but there are numerous apps you can download from the Android Market to significantly improve battery life. The Samsung Galaxy SII has dimensions of 125.3 x 66.1 x 8.5 mm and a weight of 116 grams. The Galaxy lines are thinner and lighter than the iPhone 4s.

Both of these phones offer many positives, and each has their negatives as well. They also are both available on AT&T, Sprint, and Verizon. The iPhone 4s is not available on T-Mobile, but a version of the Samsung Galaxy SII is. Depending on what features you would like in your phone, each of these lines work very well. They are great phones; your personal preferences will allow you to decide which one you like better.

our country. With every passing minute we are losing our histories to death, memory loss and record destruction."

Miller, who moved to Berea last year, is currently the president of AAGGKY. The group is around one year old, and this past weekend they met in Berea for the first time. The group meets each month on the third Saturday, and moves their meeting location around Kentucky so they're available to lots of different people.

The group focuses on aspects of research unique to the African-American community, and provides a place for researchers and historians to share their findings and strategies. They have approximately 60 members, with 200 who participate either through mailing lists or by attending meetings. Miller stated they are primarily drawing people from Central and Eastern Kentucky, but they do have a few members from Western Kentucky as well.

Their speaker on Saturday, Larry Hamilton, is a member of their group from Loveland, Ohio. A retired teacher of African American history, world studies and current events, Hamilton has spent several years tracking down his own family history, tracing it back to his great great grandmother Lucy, an offspring of a slave owner.

Her daughter, Cynthia Ross, attended Berea College in 1888, a fact he was able to confirm through Shannon Wilson, who works at the Berea College archives.

Hamilton stated that his grandmother always told stories of the ancestors, but he wasn't very interested until, as a college student, he heard Alex Hailey at Wright State University introduce his new book, "Roots".

"I knew that would be a transformative experience," Hamilton said.

After hearing Hailey, Hamilton called his grandmother and told her, "I'm bringing a tape recorder and let's talk".

In that four hour conversation, Hamilton heard of his great great grandmother Lucy traveling to Camp Nelson in Kentucky after leaving slavery, and heard about her story of "some man who guided them to Camp Nelson". While his grandmother believed it was an angel who guided them, Hamilton himself stated that he thought of the man as John G. Fee. In the two books he authored about his family history, "Lucy's Story, Right Choices But Wrongs Still Left", and "Between Two Suns, The Berea Experience," he called Fee, "the Moses Man".

The first book concentrates on Lucy's story, from her flight to Camp Nelson on, and the second focuses on the family connection to Berea College.

Fee had been involved, along with others, in improving conditions at Camp Nelson, a place where many slaves and former slaves fled to receive protection from the African-American soldiers who were recruited and trained there for the Union army. Hamilton believes that Lucy may have met Fee there, which is why she sent her only daughter to Berea College.

Hamilton showed entries from Cynthia's Berea College journal to the AAGGKY group; the journal was similar to a yearbook, and different classmates of Cynthia had signed it. Her cousin, the poet Henry Allen Laine who wrote the book, "Footprints", appeared to have written one of the entries and also attended Berea College from 1888-1899.

"I've been trying to find descendants of great grandmother's classmates, the names in these journals," Hamilton said, "so I can show them her journal entries. And I wonder if they might have journals of their ancestors, and my great grandmother may

As he finished his talk, Hamilton ended by encouraging the AAGGKY attendees to honor their ancestors.

Breakall Wins Hospital's "American Idol"

St. Joseph hosts talent show to educate about colon cancer

By Sheri Patterson
Citizen Reporter

Berea may not be hosting the next American Idol audition, but the first annual St. Joseph Hospital talent show proved Bereans do have talent.

This past Saturday night 26 participants took the stage at Union Church to show their talent and help raise colon cancer awareness in the community.

Contestants of all ages shared a variety of music genres from hip hop to classical. First place and $1,000 went to violinist Bethany Breakall, who performed "Sally Goodin". Second place and $500 was awarded to Parker Hastings for his rendition of "Rock This Town." Westley Metcalfe accepted third place and $250 for his performance of "Memories".

St. Joseph Hospital President Greg Gerad and Chris Schweighardt, chief operating officer and chief nursing officer served as Masters of Ceremonies. They introduced performers and led audience participation between acts by asking trivia questions about colon cancer. Schweighardt came up with the idea for the talent show to educate the community and recognize March as Colon Cancer Awareness Month.

Violinist Bethany Breakall, above, won first place at the first annual St. Joseph Hospital talent show for her performance of "Sally Goodin". There were 26 participants in the talent show, which was held to educate the community on colon cancer, since March is Colon Cancer Awareness Month.

Colon cancer is the second leading cause of cancer deaths in the U.S. Men and women are both equally affected by it. The CDC has reported a rise in cases in Madison Co. Fortunately, it can be prevented by early detection. If it is caught in its earliest stages, there is a 90 percent survival rate. The American Cancer Society recommends everyone to have a colonoscopy at age 50.

Katie Heckman, community relations manager of the hospital, stated, "The event was a success and plans are already underway for next year."

She would like to thank the judges Belle Jackson, Tara Bellando, Kent Gilbert and Emory Joseph. A special thanks also goes out to all participants, attendees, donors and Union Church for hosting.

Expo Encourages Building Local Food Economy

Do you want to make a cold frame or a home composter? How about getting information on soils and raised bed gardening from expert urban farmers? Do you want to join a CSA (Community Supported Agriculture) or buy transplants at the Berea College Garden Sale? Need new gloves, books on gardening or just want to have a cup of coffee and a sandwich prepared by a local restaurant?

You can do it all at the Berea Local Foods Expo on Saturday, March 24.

"The event is designed to bring new gardeners together with the experts who can answer questions and help people get started in their gardens.

No matter whether it is a single raised bed or a full-fledged gardening effort, everything the gardener needs will be available at the Local Foods Expo," said Cheyenne Olson, co-coordinator of the Local Food Expo.

While the primary purpose of the Expo is to encourage people to grow some of their food, the larger goal is to continue building a local food economy in Berea.

"Once people start growing food, even just one tomato plant," said Olson, "they realize how wonderful fresh produce is and they turn to local farmers to buy in larger quantities."

Sustainable Berea's Edible Yard Project has been working for four years to foster the creation of a local food economy. Raised beds scattered across the landscape in Berea are a result of the organization providing more than 70 raised beds to individuals, churches, institutions and businesses. Sustainable Berea has also sold more than 550 rain barrels and numerous fruit and nut trees and bushes.

Sustainable Berea's members are involved in the city's ongoing economic development planning.

"Food is essential to the well-being of the community," said Olson, "and local food can be a significant driver for jobs and local businesses. A dollar spent on local food stays in the city, while a dollar spent on imported food is gone."

The Local Foods Expo will have 22 vendors including the Master Gardeners and the Kentucky Extension Agency, Robie's Books, Berea Coffee and Tea, the Black Feather, Montgomery Farm Supply, Sticks and Stones, the Potting Shed and Bluegrass Pride. There will be information on vermiculture, demonstrations on making mushroom logs, sign-ups for workshops on making your own cold frames and composters, and the sale of raised beds, rain barrels and lots of starter seedlings and other plants.

"We are happy to partner with Sustainable Berea to bring people the Local Foods Expo," said Janet Meyer, manager of the college gardens. "We held a similar but smaller event last year and it was very successful. People have been asking if we were going to do it again. The answer is 'yes' but it will be a lot bigger this year."

The Local Foods Expo will be at the Berea College greenhouses and gardens on Scaffold Cane road from 9 to 4 p.m. on Saturday, March 24. Direct questions to Janet Meyer, at meyerj@berea.edu or call 859-985-3000. There is no admission price.

Word From Berea Streets

What are your feelings on the proposed expansion of Hwy.25?

Helen Davidson from Berea, with Hailey Davidson beside her, said, "I don't think we should have a five lane, but I think a three lane would probably help a lot. I think having pedestrian walks would also be good."

Ken Griffith of Berea said, "I feel the original plan was an extreme solution to an obvious need. The alternate proposal of three lanes is more appropriate for the situation."

Paula Tudor of Berea said, "It is a good thing. It does need to be expanded. It is especially needed before and after school and when the factories get out."

Palm Sunday Performance

First Christian Church will present the choir performance, “Come and See, an Easter Celebration,” on Sunday, March 25.

This musical drama takes place on Palm Sunday and characterizes a blind beggar in Jerusalem waiting in the street because he believes that the great prophet, Jesus, will heal his blindness.

The beggar encounters several people who are his “eyes” for the events of the triumphant entry, the crucifixion, and the resurrection. The program starts at 6:30 p.m. and will be followed by refreshments in the Fellowship Hall.

The performance is free, and the public is welcome to attend.

MSHS Teachers Learn How To Connect Students to History

History rarely ranks as the most popular subject amongst high school students, but social studies teachers at Madison Southern High School hope to remedy that problem.

Deana Abbott, Melissa Grant and Doug Martin, teachers at MSHS, are replacing traditional techniques with ones that seek to actively engage students in the process of history rather than allowing them to be passive observers in the classroom. Borrowing techniques acquired through their participation in a Teaching American History grant program administered by the Wilderness Trail Educational Cooperative, these instructors want to help their students gain an appreciation of history with the skills needed to analyze and evaluate the events of the past.

In addition to the free trainings offered by the TAH grant program, teachers also receive hundreds of dollars in free materials to supplement instruction in their classrooms. Last summer these teachers, along with approximately 25 others from high schools across Kentucky, participated in the TAH Summer Travel program which provided an all expenses paid trip to New York City. During the visit, the educators had the opportunity to visit the Statue of Liberty and Ellis Island, The United Nations, The USS Intrepid, The Empire State Building, Central Park, American History Museum, Times Square, as well as the Lower East-side Tenement Museum where they accessed classroom ready activities and resources. The group observed the cultures of Little Italy and Chinatown and received background information on how these places came about. While there, the group traveled by the city subway system like average New Yorkers.

Gone are the days of teachers assigning chapters to read and questions to answer from the textbook; instead social studies students at MSHS are examining primary source documents and images.

Rather than listening to lectures, students work cooperatively to interpret and evaluate the positions and views of historical figures and get the opportunity to examine the daily lives of average people during different time periods to make a real world connection to their lives today. Employing activities such as gallery walks, class discussion and document analyses, these teachers hope to connect 21st century kids with the happenings of the past.

Award Winning Neuroscientist and Author Presents at Berea

Berea College brings award-winning author and neuroscientist Dr. David Eagleman to present his mind-boggling lecture "Incognito: The Brain behind the Mind" on March 22 at 3 p.m. in Phelps Stokes Auditorium. During this lecture, Eagleman will share vivid examples to explain how three pounds of the most complex material we've discovered in the universe acts as "the mission control center that drives the whole operation." He uses historical references and bits of pop culture to candidly illustrate how the brain gathers intelligence information through small portals in the armored bunker of the skull. This Berea College science lecture is free and open to the public.

Eagleman directs the Laboratory for Perception and Action and the Initiative on Neuroscience and Law at Baylor College of Medicine. Author of seven neuroscience books and a work of fiction translated into 23 languages, he offers startling lessons on time perception, synesthesia, neurolaw and the brain's construction of reality.

The New York Times raves, "David Eagleman is the kind of guy who really does make being a neuroscientist look fun."

For more information about this event please contact Randall Roberts at 859-985-3359 or via email at randall_roberts@berea.edu.

Berea College is a non-denominational, comprehensive college that offers bachelor's degrees in 32 majors, including arts and sciences and select professional programs, as well as independent majors designed by students to mirror approved majors at other colleges. Every student receives a tuition scholarship for cost of education and works at least 10 hours a week to pay living expenses.

Berea College offers a high-quality, liberal arts education to students who have great promise but limited economic resources. Founded upon inclusive Christian principles in 1855, Berea College was the first interracial and coeducational college in the South. The College promotes understanding and kinship among all people, service to communities in Appalachia and beyond, and sustainable living practices that set an example of new ways to conserve our limited natural resources. Reflections

FROM THE BEREA CITIZEN ARCHIVES MARCH 1992

City Council had discussed the possibility of a seat belt ordinance, Mayor Kerby indicated that while he was all for seat belt use, he strongly opposed a law forcing the matter. "It has gotten so you can't turn around without the government telling you what to do. We are chipping away at the fabric of freedom and it has to stop somewhere." Kerby was quoted.

Stephen R. Lakes and Ruth Ford were going about their normal business when a masked man with a gun entered Lakes Food Mart. The robber got away with some cash. The incident caused the business to change some of its security measures.

Brenda Roberts of Hamilton, Ohio announced the engagement of her daughter, Rachel Beth to Gregory Bert Lakes, son of Berna Jo Young and Manuel Lakes. The wedding was planned for June 27.

Also announcing an engagement were Mr. and Mrs. Roy L. Croucher, the parents of Dawna Kari who was engaged to David Glen Gilliam, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Gilliam, their wedding was to be held on March 21st at Berea Baptist Church.

Donald and Patty Colyer were announcing the birth of a baby daughter, Miranda Hayde. She had been born on January 12. Maternal grandparents were Preston and Gaye Seals, maternal great grandfather was Luther Coffey. The paternal grandparents were Donald and Dwaine Colyer of Kingston, Tenn.

Mayor Clifford Kerby signed the proclamation designating March 16-21 as American Legion week in the City of Berea and urges the citizens of Berea to participate in all activities of the American Legion. Members of Berea Post 50 were present for the signing. Pictured are, Hugh Hacker, Melvin Higgins, Alvin Martin and Leonard Robinson, along with Kerby. The American Legion will hold a Birthday/Awards dinner Tuesday at Cliff Hagans. Legion members and their wives are urged to attend and should call the restaurant for reservations.

Casey Poynter of Mrs. Colbert's Fifth Grade Class at Silver Creek Elementary School shared a mysterious substance, called OOBLECK, during science class. OOBLECK is unique in that when pressure is applied it can be a solid, but when no pressure is applied, it turns into a liquid. Students enjoyed examining the mixture made of cornstarch and water.
